CASE WESTERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY

Academic Happy hour

By Tony Divito

February 2006 Edition

On Friday, February 10th, the University's 13th Annual Academic Happy Hour was held in the Thwing Ballroom. The main topic of the meeting was "Moving Forward: Making Change Work at Case." In order to examine all aspects of this topic, the event was structured such that there were five rows of tables, each row covering a different topic. At each table, there were typically two staff members, one faculty member, three students and one student facilitator. While there was a good attendance by staff and administration, there was a lack of attendance on behalf of the students. Each table held a discussion either on Academic Life, Campus Life, Communication, Leadership or Resources, Facilities and Technology.

The event was kicked off by a speech given by President Hundert. After this, each of the tables began their discussion. When a good idea was presented at the table, it was recorded on a note card. This information was then put on the recently made Case Wikipage. During the conversation, President Hundert made his way moving from table and would observe the discussions. At the end of the session, Hundert made one final speech, in which he stated that any change that was going to be made would be gradual, but that it started here. While this is certainly true, what will be more important to this event being a success is whether or not everything will be followed up on correctly. If people use the Wikipage forums to their fullest, and dialogue between the students and administration continues, then we can expect great things to happen. Otherwise, many of the great ideas presented
